

JETSETTERS MAGAZINE dot COM

THE BLACK DAHLIA

For more elegant apertifs and drinks try Los Angeles' Millennium Biltmore Hotel Gallery Bar and Cognac Room, near the lobby, an elegant lounge offering fine wine, exclusive liqueurs, and signature drinks, like the Black Dahlia.

The Black Dahlia Martini is named after actress Elizabeth Short, who disappeared after she was last seen catching a cab by a doorman at the Biltmore in 1947. She was later found murdered, unsolved to this day.

The Black Dahlia was invented by Greg Guzelian, the hotel's winner of the award, "Downtown's Bartender Of The Year" in 2003.

The $14 Black Dahlia is comprised of Citron Vodka, Kahlua, and Chambord, and the result is a purple/ brown drink that tastes like chocolate. It is served in a martini glass with an orange rind. Phone the Gallery Bar, at 213/624-1011 to find out about the jazz artists that play Thursday and Saturday nights.

(Editor's note: In 2004 new forensics determined that Ms. Short was murdered by the surgeon who owned the garage/apartment where she lived.)

To read the entire feature story, log on to Jetsetters Magazine at www.jetsettersmagazine.com

